- Next Goal:

Off-roading in Scotland

- Any off-road riding has to be done with landowner permission
- Landowner is responsible for any accidents
- Secured the use of flat fields, woodland and selected motocross tracks to deliver our structured training sessions
- In the Scottish borders we have use of a 200-acre farm with a great mixture of terrain and a 6000-acre private forest.

THE MOTORCYCLIST'S GUIDE

Martin,

8th October 2018

As promised, here's your copy. It'll go on sale through Amazon and eBay next week but I wanted you to get a copy before that.

You're probably unaware of how much I valued your input (although I told you often enough), not just in your advice and corrections – but in not laughing at my early efforts and general support of the project as a whole. With my old bike and second-hand gear, it was reassuring to know that someone with much more biking experience and knowledge of Scotland's road than me, thought I was on the right track!

Having got my hands on a copy of the book, and seen that the cover isn't upside down, ~~or~~ missing the C in Scotland, I can relax. My next worry is that no-one will buy it!

I hope you enjoy the attached! (You can read it on the ACT.)

John
